TOP 5 HOLIDAY TOXINS from ASPCApro.org

- Chocolate This tasty treat accounts for the vast majority of holiday calls to the ASPCA Animal Poison Control Center (Halloween and Valentine's Day don't even come close). Why? Often it's because of wrapped chocolate gifts left under the tree. And with the popularity of higher cocoa content, it takes even less candy to get our four-legged friends into a world of trouble.
- Tree Preservatives What is generally seen is mild gastrointestinal upset. However, if there is bacterial contamination, the potential for gastrointestinal upset can be more significant.
- Poinsettias Poinsettias are primarily mucous-membrane irritants—and despite the worry they cause pet owners, the plants aren't usually too dangerous if treated properly.
- Medications Guests. Winter colds. Kids home from school. This trifecta of medication exposure dangers calls for extra caution. Add the fact that worried pet owners generally can't remember how much medicine was in that little baggie that the pup ate, and you can just feel a headache coming on. Any and all medications need to be stored up high or in a locked cabinet.
- Alcohol Yes, some days we feel like going home and having a stiff drink after dealing with all those chocolate cases. However, right now we are talking about the little Chihuahua who likes to scale the couch and help herself to the owner's eggnog. The good news: Animals usually vomit after alcohol ingestion. The bad news: Alcohol is absorbed quickly.

RUFIO

Need help? Perhaps you haven't taken your Christmas tree down yet. Perhaps you need some assistance in undecorating the tree. Rufio is there to help. He is about fourteen weeks old and full of beans and inquisitiveness. If you would like to meet Rufio, and perhaps give him a forever home, let us know and we can arrange a meeting with his foster parent. He would be your purr-fect assistant!

Kingdom Animal Shelter is celebrating the Twelve Days of Christmas. Here is how it works... Although selling is over as of now, each $5 ticket is eligible for any of the fabulous prizes. From December 13th through December 24th we will pick one winner each day and that day's winner will get all the prizes listed for that day. And then that ticket goes back into the pot. So, theoretically, the same ticket could win every day. There are lots of great prizes including a Keurig coffee machine, a $50 certificate towards dinner at Rabbit Hill Inn, a Detailing at St. J Subaru, cheese basket from Jasper Hill, and many others...and the grand prize is two nights for two people with breakfast at the Danville Inn and Restaurant. Winners will be announced on Saint J Subaru's Facebook page DAILY, or check the KAS Facebook page. Every winner will be contacted by Karla Degreenia from Saint J Subaru to arrange pick up of their prizes!
